

Silly Love 03:05

Early morning time seven forty five and I'm Feeling fine about to get mine
Broke as the day is long early morning sun shines
Getting paid but I ain't one for fun times
Though I know some people who live to make the sun shine
Can't deal with the world so they hide behind the grapevine
Sipping and swirling pretending it's a great wine
I see them swallow don't deal and take time
With their emotions they break wind and fake smiles
Like all is good making their skin thicker
But sometimes the liquor is slicker and make 'em talk quicker
So you see they don't walk they crawl either
They pick at a scab to make the wound bigger
Can't deal with the bad it makes them feel sicker
So they swim in a yeast infested pool of a brew maker
Drying out maybe years later

Chorus

*When you feel that liquor hitting the back of throat
Tell me does it feel brand new
When you feel that liquor hitting the back of throat
Tell me does it feel brand new*

Now if I've seen it once I've seen it in their eyes
The way it sparkles it's part of the signs
Like they were having an affair sometimes
They touch the bottle like touching thighs
Kissing the top of the tip of their stash
Letting it sliver and slide down their hatch
Making her dance switching bottles in their hands
Drinking till reaching the bottom of their beer cans
Always thinking the solution is in the next one
That pain can be numbed and the hurt can be undone
Their eyes are in caves in the darkness far from
The faces and places the people that scarred 'em
They like to swim in their lakes and forget
Pretend to be Zeus or warriors in fact
They not even close to being fighters I suspect
They just pumped up on liquor and speak trash
